Patrick Terry is a senior audit manager in the Atlanta office of Joseph Decosimo and Company, LLC. He has 19 years of professional leadership experience in public accounting with international, regional and local firms. Before joining Decosimo, Patrick was the president and founder of a financial firm providing services to small to mid-sized businesses.

He has significant experience working with a variety of industries including technology, manufacturing and distribution, and professional service. He has a depth of knowledge from working with closely held entrepreneurial companies, as well as public companies and venture-backed entities, all with both domestic and foreign operations. His core competencies include traditional financial audits, merger and acquisition consulting, equity offerings, compensation and benefits, as well as due diligence.

Patrick is a graduate of Kennesaw State University. He received his certified public accountant (CPA) certification in 1992 and is licensed to practice in Georgia. He is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) and the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants (GSCPA). He is also a member of the MIT Enterprise Forum and the Technology Association of Georgia.
